WHO WE ARE

Project Transformation is a children’s literacy program that transforms lives and revitalizes economically distressed communities by providing educational opportunities, fostering positive leadership, and engaging individuals and congregations in effective social outreach.

Project Transformation’s summer programs for children support their academic, physical, and social-emotional needs. Leading these programs are college-age young adults, who need meaningful ways to serve and explore future vocations, all while developing as young, principled leaders. As “PT Interns,” these emerging young leaders commit to a nine-week summer or year-round internship where they live in intentional community, lead summer and afterschool programs for children, and meet with local leaders to explore various vocations in service. Our programs are strategically housed inside churches in and near under-resourced communities, offering churches an opportunity to reconnect with their changing neighborhood.

We believe that transformation happens through relationships. In all that we do, we seek to create space for healthy, developmental relationships to form between children, college-age young adults and churches. Through positive relationships, each experiences transformation—it’s a win-win-win formula.
